Alden Potts, 31, is marking her seventh year in real estate. A realtor and accredited relocation specialist with Dorsey Alston, Realtors, Potts helps educate transfers on area schools and recreation and assists them in finding a new home.

Accomplishments of the native Atlantan include: Number Three, Dorsey Alston, Realtors (2009) Top Five, Company-wide, Dorsey Alston, Realtors (2008); Top 5 Percent, Atlanta Board of Realtors (2008); more than $30 million in transactions from 2005 to 2007; and Life member, Atlanta Board of Realtors Million Dollar Club.

Some of the neighborhoods she specializes in are Collier Hills, Peachtree Hills, Argonne Forest, Ridgewood Heights and, in general, areas in Buckhead and Intown.

A member of the Junior League of Atlanta and volunteer for the Shepherd Center, Potts spends time away from work with family – including husband Carter and 15-month-old son Carter Potts Jr. – and friends.

“Finding balance is a challenge for someone who adores being with family, friends, and working around the clock,” she says. “It helps that all of my clients are either existing friends or quickly become new friends. After all, it’s helping friends and building long-term relationships that defines my success.”
